S were lote of contract includes and the contract contract of the contract of ased on that relationship, the US autonobile giant asked if the company would be interested in making radiator caps. Sundram Fasteners had no experience of making the product, but Krishna unhesitatingly a greed to buy out GM's plaint if the car maker taught it how to make the caps. Sundram Fasteners got some of its staff trained, paid ₹3 crore to buy the plant, shipped it to India and growth, not in diversifying on a whim or because you have secured a licence to make another product. He reckons that the Indian automobile market, of about three million cars and vans and 16 million two-wheelers now, can absorb 10-12 million cars and 50-60 million motorcycles. "To me, the automotive industry is a sunrise industry and we are well-placed on a growth trajectory. Everybody knows us, we know everybody. Our products are well-accepted by everybody. As they grow, we will grow. Sundram Fasteners' future is completely assured because of the kind of growth we see," says Krishna.

Krishna also believes that Sundram Fasteners is not about its products, it is about its people. From eight employees in 1966, it has over 8,000 now, including in China and the United Kingdom. His biggest achievement: in the past 50 years, the company has not had a single hour of work stoppage because of labour issues. How did he manage that? Purely by communication, replies Krishna.

"Over time, I realised that making a good product, satisfying customers, increasing productivity, satisfying shareholders... these are only the 'tooling'. The final product is raising the standard of living of workers," he says. He recalls the numerous instances when retiring employees, who had served long years in the company, would tell him how they and their families had benefited from the company. Nothing gives him greater satisfaction than this.

His two daughters, Arathi and Arundathi, are in the company, with Arathi, Joint Managing Director, looking after domestic operations, and Arundathi, Deputy Managing Director, taking care of the international business.

Does this student of comparative literature have any regrets about the way his life changed on his return to India in the 1960s? "No. Manufacturing has now become part of my life. I have done it for 50 years now. A lot of people think I am an engineer," says Krishna.
